Let's Discuss

Sideloader Stack a Load

- In the task of stacking a load you must always remember that a load is to be placed, not dropped.

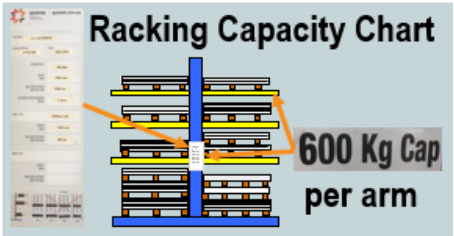
- Do not attempt to re-align a load after entry into a racking storage location.

  Loads must not be pushed or pulled, this includes nudging.

  The load must be taken out of the rack and the process of stacking a load commenced again.

- To stack a load, position the sideloader as close as possible to the required position of placement confirming the load and rack are aligned.

  Operators must check to ensure the safe working load of the racking or bay will not be exceeded by the load.



- Ensuring clearance, lift the mast to the point that the load can be extended into the required location.

  Ensure the load is level and clear.

- Slowly extend the mast. When the load is located completely in front of the wheel arms, stop the mast reach out movement.

- Slowly lower the load until it rests evenly in the required location and slightly tilt down the tines.

- Slowly retract the mast and when clear, lower the tines.

This publication has been reviewed by SafeWork NSW and approved it for use as part of a SafeWork NSW enforceable undertaking.
This publication is for informational purposes and is not intended to provide any legal advice. This information should not be used or relied upon in regard to any particular facts or circumstances without first seeking expert or legal advice.

- Remember in the task of lifting a load:

  - The load is to be placed, not dropped.
  - Do not attempt to re-align a load after entry into a racking storage location, this includes nudging.
  - The load must be taken out of the rack and the process of stacking a load commenced again.

This publication has been reviewed by SafeWork NSW and approved it for use as part of a SafeWork NSW enforceable undertaking.
This publication is for informational purposes and is not intended to provide any legal advice. This information should not be used or relied upon in regard to any particular facts or circumstances without first seeking expert or legal advice.